the 1990s, the number of people in the UK who are employed in the public sector has increased from 10.5 million to 12.5 million (12.5% of the population).

There are a number of reasons for this increase. One is that the public sector has become a more important part of the economy. Another is that the public sector has become more efficient. A third is that the public sector has become more attractive to workers. A fourth is that the public sector has become more diverse.

The public sector has become a more important part of the economy because it provides a range of services that are essential for the well-being of the population. These services include health care, education, and social care. The public sector has also become more efficient because of the introduction of new technologies and the restructuring of public services.

The public sector has become more attractive to workers because it offers a range of benefits that are not available in the private sector. These benefits include job security, pension schemes, and access to public services. The public sector has also become more diverse because it now employs a wide range of people from different backgrounds and cultures.

The public sector has become more diverse because it has become a more important part of the economy. This has led to an increase in the number of people who are employed in the public sector. The public sector has also become more diverse because it now employs a wide range of people from different backgrounds and cultures.
